

The Postman

- 1) The postmen are busy each day
Delivering many a letter without delay
Are house to house walking
As occasionally to pedestrians talking
- 2) Some post-sorters are busy driving around
To see how much more is to in each post-box be found
These are then with no doubt
Taken to the post-office to be sorted out
- 3) At the post office stood up getting cramp
All the new days envelopes are by people given a stamp
Before without being mistaken
They are to different towns taken
- 4) They are then put in many a postal sack
To be carried on a postman's back
As they once more tire out their feet
Walking street to street

© Paul Wilkins 31/07/08